Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, however, it will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man. If physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The lack of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, and Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct Constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this innocuous and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No gripping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

For something new, nice, economical and effective, try a box of

Lax-ets

THE LUMBER TRUST.

The Senate has ordered an inquiry into the operations of the Lumber Trust, which Senator Kittredge of South Dakota declares that the "king of all trusts in restraint of trade—remorseless in its grasp on the people, and the only change which it contemplates is to increase the price of its products at stated and frequent intervals, without regard to cost." He also said that "within the last five years the price of lumber and timber products have arbitrarily advanced from 100 to 500 per cent."

Senator Kittredge proposed to protect the people from this monopoly by having the federal government investigate the trust and suggested that there is a simple way to help break the power of this rapacious trust if Republican members of Congress were willing to do it, by cutting off the tariff protection. The tariff tax on lumber ranges from 10 to 64 per cent of its value, and if lumber products were placed on the free list there would be considerable competition from Canada and other countries that have surplus lumber to sell. The ensuing competition under free lumber, joined with the criminal prosecution of the lumber barons, for no fine would probably have any effect on them, would break up the combination or trust and bring down the price of lumber to what it is worth.

It is singular that every congressional district but one adjacent to the Canadian line where the voters would especially benefit by competing lumber is represented by a Republican, who all refuse to revise the tariff, or even allow the subject to be considered. And in the next Congress the same political alignment prevails with two exceptions. How can the settlers of South Dakota and other prairie states expect to be relieved from the exactions of the Lumber Trust if they continue to elect Republicans to represent them, who are pledged to continue the Republican tariff policy that protects the trusts?

It will take two years, if not more, for the Department of Commerce and Labor to investigate and report on the Lumber Trust, and then, if the Department of Justice thinks it can make a case against the Lumber Barons, there will be a long drawn out legal fight and during all that time the people will still be suffering from the prohibitive prices the Lumber Trust is charging. In a week Congress could pass a bill placing lumber on the free list and thus give, at least, partial relief. Every thousand feet of lumber imported from Canada or elsewhere, would relieve the lumber market of part of the strain the Lumber Trust now imposes on it. The trust rather than see its competitors underselling it would naturally reduce its prices to meet the competition.

But Senator Kittredge, like some other Republican congressmen that want certain products, relieved from the tariff tax, are unwilling to help the Democrats force a general revision of the tariff which would give relief from the present tariff high prices. They believe in the Republican policy of protecting the trusts, but cry out about some particular trust, so as to appear to their constituents to favor tariff revision.

Now the British merchants propose to demand indemnities for the loss they expect to sustain through the suppression of the opium traffic in China. Great Britain has built up a big trade in opium which her merchants are not willing to give up without some return. Sending missionaries and opium on the same ship to China has been a British practice for years.

Long Live the King.

Is the popular cry throughout European countries; while in America the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!" of which Mrs. Julia Ryder Paine, Turro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold." Mrs. Paine's opinion is shared by a majority of the inhabitants of this country. New Discovery cures weak lungs and sore throats after all other remedies have failed; and for coughs and colds it's the only sure cure. Guaranteed by F. D. Hall, Druggist. 50c and $1.00. WAR WITH JAPS

Pacific coast. The character of the discussion leads us to feel confident that a solution will be reached satisfactory to all concerned. The result of the meeting is that the delegation has telegraphed to the president of the San Francisco board of education and the superintendent of schools to come to Washington at once for a conference with the president and secretary of state.

The existing treaty between the United States and Japan will expire March 12 this year. President Roosevelt has heretofore assured the members of congress from California that he would endeavor to form a new treaty with the Japanese empire which would meet their entire approval, and at the same time prove satisfactory to the Tokyo government. The Californians have in the past insisted on an exclusion act to bar Japanese coolies out of the United States, but it is hinted that Senators Perkins and Flint and the members of the house of representatives from that state have practically agreed to waive this demand and leave it to President Roosevelt to negotiate a new convention which will keep Japanese coolie labor out of this country. Japan has made it clear that she will only consider a treaty that is mutual.

It is admitted at the Japanese embassy that Viscount Aoki, the Japanese ambassador, has discussed the proposed treaty with the president, and that they are in perfect accord. The second secretary of the embassy stated that Japan does not encourage her laborers to come to this country.

ALL BILLS SUSPENDED.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 31.—Governor Gillett will send to the legislature today a message recommending that action on all bills and resolutions bearing on the Japanese question be suspended pending consideration of a compromise proposition made by President Roosevelt. Leaders of both houses have indicated their entire willingness to do so.

SERVICE MADE ON CLERK EMERSON

WHO WILL APPEAR BEFORE THE
SUPREME COURT IN CITY OF COLUMBUS.

Indictment Against State Printer is Quashed—Requisition Made for Illinois Prisoner.

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—Lawson E. Emerson, clerk of the supreme court of Ohio, was served with papers citing him to appear before the court at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon and show cause why he should not be removed from office. The papers were issued last week, but were not served until this time because Emerson was absent from the city. Emerson is charged with alleged neglect of his official duties. An expert accountant is engaged in auditing the clerk's books. Emerson is serving his second term, which would not expire until 1939. Mr. Emerson arrived in the city Wednesday evening. When asked by a press representative for a statement Emerson said: "What I have to say will be told to the supreme court this afternoon. You fellows can say anything you like. It seems you have said enough since I have been gone."

Mrs. Emerson appeared in the supreme court consulting room during the day and had a short interview with Judge Crew. It is said Mrs. Emerson wanted to know what if any shortage was shown by the clerk's books, but the justice informed her she would have to await the report of the experts now engaged in the examination of the records.

Johnson Indictment Dismissed.

Columbus, O., Jan. 31.—Judge Evans of common pleas court sustained the demurrer to the indictment against John W. Johnson, state printer. The indictment charged Johnson with having attempted to influence the circuit court in the ouster suit brought against him by former Supervisor Mark Slater, by writing a letter to the court assailing Slater. Johnson held the indictment was faulty because it did not show that the letter was sent to the judges; and further, that it did not show that the letter had been written by Johnson instead of the party by the name of E. T. Ryan, who had signed it. He also held that the indictment failed to show that any crime had been committed. Judge Evans in his decision found these faults in the indictment. Until Mr. Johnson is reindicted the case is now dropped.

Requisition on Ohio Governor.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 31.—Governor Deneen issued a requisition on the governor of Ohio for the return to Chicago of Frank Weaver, alias Frank Stevens, who is wanted for burglary. It is alleged that on July 12, 1936, Weaver, together with Benjamin Rousenshizer and James Tyler, entered the offices of the United Order of American Bricklayers and Stonemasons and stole $27,739 from a safe. Weaver is under arrest in Cincinnati, according to a telegram received by the chief of police of Chicago.

Cincinnati Banker Freed.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 31.—Rudolph Kloybolte, one of the leading bankers of this city, was acquitted of the charge of false pretenses and larceny in obtaining $250 from the Lührig Coal company in connection with an alleged deal between the Lührig company and the Marmet Coal company to supply the city water works with coal in 1930. Kloybolte was summoned to appear before the grand jury to testify in the investigation of alleged "bid-fixing" in connection with city coal contracts.

They are Attorney E. G. Kinkadee of Cincinnati, O., representative of the International Policyholders' committee board, and William A.

Marks, a merchant of this city. In his letter of resignation to Superintendent Kelsey Mr. Kinkadee says: "The work already done by canvass has occupied more time than was expected to be necessary for the completion of the entire count. I am convinced that the statute does not afford sufficient means for making a fair, certain and expeditious canvass."

THE POWER OF STEAM.

Many May See But It Takes Genius to Realize.

When James Watt saw the steam causing the kettle lid to jump up and down, he said "There must be power in that steam that it can lift such a weight."

There was. Billions prior to him had seen the same phenomenon and regarded it as an unexplained mystery. Recent scientific research has put its finger on the "cause" of Dandridge, Pilling Fair, and consequent Baldness, and has unearthed a tiny germ which steals the life from the roots of human hair. Newbro's Herpicide destroys this germ and consequently restores the hair to its natural state. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co. Detroit, Mich. Two sizes—50 cents and $1.00. City Drug Store, Special Agent.

Public Meetings Will Pass.

Paris, Jan. 31.—The chamber of deputies concluded the discussion of and adopted the public meetings bill, 550 against 5. The bill consists of four sections. The first authorizes meetings without previous declarations of intention; the second repeals the restrictions contained in the acts of 1831, 1905 and 1907; the third instructs the mayors of France to place the existing meeting places at the disposal of the public, and the fourth holds the organizers of meetings responsible for damage. This law will become operative as soon as it passes the senate.

MR. BRYAN IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Jan. 31.—Arrangements are nearly complete for the coming of William Jennings Bryan, February 20, under the auspices of the Columbus board of trade, and every indication points to an attendance of 1,000 representative Columbus men at the banquet at which he is to speak.

Just what time Mr. Bryan will arrive in the city is not known. At any rate, he will be met at the train by a representative committee and taken to the Chittenden hotel, where a suite of rooms has been reserved for him. If he arrives in time it is likely that something in the way of a reception will be held at the hotel in the afternoon, if the distinguished guest feels so disposed.

CONSENTED TO WED TO SECURE A HOME

Young Girl Only 16 Would Marry a Man to Whom She is in No Way Attached.

Captain Wilson of the Salvation Army, is looking for a position for a 16 year old girl, where she will have a good home and where she will receive instruction which will be of value to young girls.

The case is a worthy one and any family needing the assistance of a good girl could benefit themselves by communicating with Captain Wilson.

In speaking of the case, Captain Wilson stated that the girl had about promised to marry a man 27 years old. The girl is but 16 years old, and told Captain Wilson that she did not care for the man whom she was about to wed, but thought she would get a better home by accepting the offer of marriage.

The girl's stepfather has not given her the best of homes, and her mother, realizing this, consented to the match. Captain Wilson realizes that such a wedding can culminate only unhappily for the girl, and the bonds will no doubt be broken at some future date in the divorce court.

The captain wishes to save the girl from this unhappiness and humiliation by getting for her a good home where she will be satisfied.

Socialists Kill Extortioner.

Warsaw, Jan. 31.—Socialists undertook and carried out the execution of a bandit who made an unsuccessful attempt to secure $500 from the Commercial bank of Warsaw. The man entered the bank and asked the director to give him $500. His request was refused, whereupon the man sat down in the waiting room and announced his intention of remaining until he received the money. The bank officials feared to ask the police for help and allowed him to stay. A Socialist member of the bank's staff, however, called up Socialist headquarters on the telephone and explained the situation. Two men from headquarters at once came over to the bank. They approached the man in the waiting room, quickly threw a sack over his head, and then blew out his brains. The police have not interfered with the men who did the killing.

The Agent of the Tagblatt Property

(Original.)

Old Steiger, who had charge of the Tagblatt house and grounds, was probably the worst landlord that has ever been seen on the face of the globe. When Tagblatt died, Steiger was appointed custodian of the property by the court, and as such he was then a young man. The estate of the will had excited a great deal of comment at the time of Tagblatt's death, but that had been some time ago, and no one living seemed to know anything about it. Many persons had rented the property, but no one could be found who could get a good landlord, agent, or whatever it was, and not a tenant had remained a year.

The place was situated near the foot of the Harz mountains, on the outskirts of a village. The village had grown to be a city, and, having enveloped the property, old Tagblatt's bequest had grown very valuable—that is, the land had, for the house was at most uninhabitable from age.

If Steiger was the worst landlord in the world, Chris and Gretchen Rheinhardt were the best tenants. The rental of the Tagblatt property had never been high, and when Chris and Gretchen were married they decided to take it. This they did with open eyes, for they knew all about old Steiger and his ways. Hans was a carpenter and could make repairs himself. So the young couple decided to take the place at the low rental and not trouble the landlord to do anything for them. By this means they hoped to be let alone and not have any trouble.

Chris spent a good deal of time when he first went into the house endeavoring to make it habitable. Steiger came along while he was at work and with the usual abuse and oaths threatened if he made any changes in the house he would prosecute him under the law. Chris desisted for the time being, but when Steiger went away he proceeded with his repairs.

However, it was plain that there would be no peace in the house, and the couple talked over the matter of leaving it. They finally decided to stay, Chris for the reason that he was too determined to be driven out and Gretchen because she was of such a sweet disposition that she was fitted to get on with Satan himself. But Steiger seemed determined to drive them out. They made it difficult for him by denying him pretenses. The rent they invariably paid before it was due. They never asked for anything to be done to the property. And, whatever patching they did was for improvement, as any court would have decided. Notwithstanding all this Chris made it so hot for them that Chris at last gave up and told Gretchen that he must either give up their lease or go into a lunatic asylum. Gretchen's lovely disposition seemed not a whit shaken, and they decided that thereafter Chris should keep out of Steiger's way and she would receive the abuse.

Then came a tussle between good and evil. When Steiger was seen coming down the street Chris would escape by a back door, and when the old man stopped to abuse his tenants Gretchen would meekly submit to the lashings of his tongue. Gretchen took it into her head to say to Steiger that if he would not be so unreasonable, so one day when the door opened and he stood glaring at her she took a candle off the mantle, intending to tell him the story of the Saviour. What was her surprise to see him the moment he saw it turn away and hurry on down the street, sending back voices of execrations, just as retreating soldiers will turn and fire at an enemy.

But Gretchen had found an expedient. After that Steiger let them alone for a long while. Indeed, he did not call again till just before the expiration of the lease, when he made a fierce onslaught, accusing Gretchen of having been trying to burn the house. She covered before him for a moment, for he looked more terrible than ever she had seen him; then, taking up the crucifix, she was beginning to tell him of the example and sacrifice of the figure on the cross when with a howl he made off again, just as he had done before.

Having found a way to protect themselves, they decided to renew their lease, but Steiger did not appear, and the tenants submitted the matter to the court of wills.

One day the judge sent for the tenants, and they went to him together. "You have accepted the Tagblatt property for a year?" he asked.

"One year. Here is the lease. It expired a month ago. To whom shall we pay rent?"

"Steiger has disappeared. After discovering this I looked up the will, which is on record. It seems that Tagblatt had a shrew for a wife, and they were always quarrelling. Mrs. Tagblatt died first, and when her husband followed her he left their home to the devil."

"To the devil!" exclaimed Chris and Gretchen, the woman crossing herself. "Yes, to the devil, with the provision that if any couple could be found to live in it one year they were to be its owners."

"Get in himself!" exclaimed Gretchen.

"Where this agent named Steiger came from and where he got his authority no one seems to know. He got hold of the property before I came on the bench. But that is now of no importance. I will have the property made over to you jointly."

"Jesu Maria. We have been paying rent to the devil!"

ADVERTISING AN ART.

But It Should Be Made an Art That Calls Beauty to Its Service.

Advertising has indeed become an art. It remains for it to become, if not a fine art, at least an art that calls beauty to its service. When it does, much of the energy that is now misdirected, much of the money that is now prodigally wasted in destroying the world's beauty, will be saved.

The right procedure is indicated by the most conspicuous medium for public advertising. The press, in its daily, weekly or monthly forms, offers altogether the best means for calling public attention to all sorts of things. The best of public journals—those which are recognized as the most desirable media for advertising and which consequently obtain the highest prices for their space—do not fail to classify and restrict in a judicious manner the advertisements that they print. They confine them to certain parts of the publication, they restrict their display to certain decorous styles of type, recognizing that to admit a helter skelter distribution through all columns or to display them in incoherent fashion according to the whims of the advertisers would largely destroy the very objects held in view. The readers of these journals would resent the intrusion of advertising matter into the space set apart for news, editorials, etc., and the influence that gives the advertising its value would decline.

In the same way the forms of advertising that now give exceeding offense to the community ought to be restricted and kept within proper limits. If this were effected the practice would change from the public nuisance that it now is to a function that, in a considerable degree, might couple genuine service to the public with a presentation of its material in an interesting and even esthetically attractive fashion.—Sylvester Baxter in Century.

WEARING A WIG.

A Help to the Health of Those With Bald Heads.

An eminent American who while in Paris consulted a famous physician of that city to ascertain if there was any remedy for baldness was told by the doctor that the best thing to do was to wear a toupee or wig. The American said that he always regarded the wearing of a wig as an evidence of a man's vanity, but he was quite surprised when the French physician replied: "You are quite mistaken. The wearing of a wig is regarded by those who have carefully studied the subject of health as a beneficial safeguard. A man who from any cause has lost a good part of his hair usually loses it some time after middle life, when his vitality begins to ebb. You must bear in mind that the scalp is filled with myriads of blood vessels, and when it is exposed without the covering that nature intended to give it a man is apt to suffer from sudden and acute attacks of cold, catarrh and influenza. I have often prescribed the wearing of a toupee or wig to a patient who has come to me complaining of his susceptibility to colds, and in nine cases out of ten after the wig has been worn the susceptibility has ceased at once. Many cases of deafness I have traced to colds constantly recurring in those who have lost their hair and who have provided no substitute for nature's covering. Some cases of chronic sore throat are traceable to the same cause. In some instances patients suffering from tuberculosis of the lungs in the early stages have found decided protection from colds by wearing a wig. Those who need to wear a wig and will not do so must be regarded as victims of vanity rather than those who, accepting the inevitable, make the best of their misfortune, for I regard baldness as nothing less than a misfortune to any man or woman."—Leslie's Weekly.

Children and Dogs.

The child who is taught to love animals and to have a dog as a companion is introduced to a friend of the truest and best kind—the kind of friendship that lasts. Have you never had a dog? Then you don't know what pleasure can be had in his companionship in rambling, in his quiet presence in your room, his unobtrusiveness when human company would bore you; a "chum" who always adapts himself to your mood when man or woman would jar upon you. By all means cultivate in children a love of animals, especially of "man's best friend," the dog.—New York Herald.

Anglicized French.

For two centuries we have been crying "Encore!" at the end of a song, where a Frenchman never says it, his own equivalent for it strangely being the Latin "Bis!" And "on the tapis" appears in English far more often than in French, and misunderstood at that, since it does not mean "on the carpet," but on the tablecloth of the council table for discussion.—London Chronicle.

PAINTING UNDER A DOUBLE INSPIRATION

(Original.)

In Interlaken, at the base of the Swiss Alps, one gets a fine view of the Jungfrau raising its head, veiled with snow, in apparent close proximity. One day a girl sat before an easel endeavoring to transfer the mountain to canvas. Whether it was that she had little artistic talent or was a beginner, she did not succeed in making an imposing picture.

The girl drew back to have a look at her work, sighed and dropped her palette.

"Mademoiselle seems discouraged," said a voice behind her in French. She turned and saw the pale face of a young man evidently in poor health.

"I only speak English," she said. "I am an American."

"Oh, an American! So am I." And he repeated what he had said in his native tongue.

"I shall never learn to paint," said the girl despondently.

"Perhaps you have been too long at work. Why not leave off and begin again in the morning when you are fresh?"

"That's a good suggestion. I began the picture in the morning."

"In that case I would certainly recommend you to work on it only before noon."

"Why?"

"Well, the mountain is under different light in the morning. Besides, usually one's best work is done in the early part of the day."

"Are you an artist?"

"I paint, but every one of an ideal temperament either paints a little or dabbles in writing verses or something of the kind."

Every morning after that the girl sat before her easel, and often the stranger, who sojourned—for his health—at the same hotel as she, strolled by, looked at her work and spoke to her about it, now and then venturing a friendly criticism. But the only words of encouragement he gave her were:

"Don't work too long at one time. When your work looks unsatisfactory to you, leave it, and likely you will be better pleased with it when you have rested." And what the stranger said proved to be true. In the morning she was surprised that she had been dissatisfied with her work of the previous day. She would sit down before her canvas, and after spending a couple of hours with her brushes it would seem that she had undone all she had achieved the previous day. Then the stranger would come along and remind her that in the morning when refreshed she would likely again see her painting under a different influence. "Go take a walk this afternoon," he said. "Paint in the morning; stroll in the afternoon."

In this way the picture grew day by day like the mountain. The darker shadows grew deeper, the lighter blended more perfectly with them or the white snow. Every morning the artist noticed some beauty that had appeared commonplace to her the night before, and finally the whole assumed a grandeur which delighted and surprised her. But she was now painting every day with the stranger beside her. There was something in his dark, dreamy eyes, his intellectual brow, his pleasant voice, his kindly sympathy, that charmed her. Then came a revelation. She was painting under the inspiration of love.

The picture was finished. The girl needed money, and the stranger advised her to take it to Paris and offer it for sale. She determined to do so, and the stranger promised to meet her there and, if possible, assist her in disposing of it. They met one morning in an art store where the picture had been sent before them. There it stood on an easel, and when the dealer joined them he said:

"As soon as I looked at the canvas I pronounced it a Demond. Demond had a picture hung last season in the salon, a Mont Blanc, which is not equal to this. Besides, the style is Demond's—coloring, tone, values, all. When I came to look at the name and saw another's I was surprised."

The girl whose work had been mistaken for that of a successful artist was delighted. A color rose to her cheek, a light to her eye; a happy smile played about her lips.

"What would the picture be worth with Demond's name on it?" asked her friend.

"Twenty thousand francs."

"And with Demond's name as collaborator?"

"In that case I would not give more than 16,000 francs for it."

On a shelf near by lay a palette and brushes. He who was befriending the girl took up a brush and, stepping to the picture, wrote under her name that of G. Demond.

The tableau that ensued was that of one quiescent figure and two who were astonished. The girl's face especially showed wonder, but at a look from her companion she refrained from speaking.

The same evening Demond stood before Miss Barker endeavoring to make her take a check for half the price of the picture.

"How did you do your work without my knowing it?" she asked.

"I advised you to walk in the afternoon, bribing the maid at the hotel to bring the canvas to my room from yours and watch for your return."

"But you seem to have done better than your piece that has been hung in the salon."

"That was because I painted under the inspiration of love."

"I thought," she replied, with averted face, "that I painted under an inspiration." GERTRUDE GOWAN.

THE DUTY OF HAPPINESS.

Keep Your Face to the Sunlight and Smile Through Your Tears.

I know an old man who has had a great deal of trouble and many losses and misfortunes, but he started out in life with a firm determination to extract just as much real enjoyment from it as he went along as possible—not in dissipation, but in wholesome recreation and fun. He has always tried to see the humorous side of things, the bright side and the duty of happiness.

The result is that, although this man has had more than his share of sorrow in his career, he has developed the inestimable faculty of making the best of every situation and of always facing the sun and turning his back to the shadows. This life habit of cheerfulness and optimism has brought out a sweetness of character and a poise and serenity of mind which are the envy of all who know him. Although he has lost his property and the most of his family and relatives, yet he radiates sunshine and helpfulness wherever he goes.

A man who can laugh outside when he is crying inside, who can smile when he feels badly, has a great accomplishment. We all love the one who believes the sun shines when he cannot see it.

A potted rose in a window will turn its face away from the darkness toward the light. Turn it as often as you will, it always turns away from the darkness and lifts its face upward toward the sun.

So we instinctively shrink from cold, melancholy, lumpy natures and turn our faces toward the bright, cheerful and the sunshiny. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole atmosphere of cloud and gloom.

Your ability to carry your own sunshine with you, your own lubricant, your own light, so that, no matter how heavy the load or dark the way, you will be equal to the emergency, will measure your ability to continue and to achieve.—Success.

How Clark Received the Gift.

Broken by ill health and bowed down by disappointment, Clark retired to private life in bitterness of soul and passed his remaining twenty-three years of craven existence in obscurity and poverty. Friends called attention to Clark's sad condition a few years before he died, and the legislature of Virginia grandiloquently acknowledged his great services and sent him a jeweled sword. The old hero's anger was aroused. "When Virginia needed a sword I gave her one," he exclaimed to the messenger. "She now sends me this? I want bread." And he thrust the blade of the costly gift into the ground and broke it at the hilt.—Lyman T. Sprague, in "George Roberts Clark and His Conquest of the Middle West," in Outlook Magazine.

True, I often made my best friends my deadly enemies and turned every man's hand against me on more than one occasion, but at last I triumphed. THE HOUSE OF LORDS

CHECKS IT HAS RECEIVED AT THE HANDS OF THE COMMONS.

The Long Parliament Put the Feet Out of Business Altogether For a Number of Years—Bolingbroke's Way With the Noble Lords.

There is an idea in the minds of very many persons that the British house of lords is supreme and can do pretty well what it pleases. This, however, is a mistake. On several notable occasions their noble lordships have been paralyzed and have got very much the worst of it in stormy arguments with the gentlemen of the house of commons.

The first occasion on which this happened was when the peers captured to differ with the long parliament, which was at the time engaged in a life and death struggle with Charles I. The commons on this occasion wasted no valuable time in talking, but promptly abolished the lords altogether and turned them, archbishops, dukes, belted earls and all the rest of the gorgeous coroneted crowd, into the street. The gilded chamber was vacant.

For half a dozen years or so the country got on without any house of lords.

All the checks the house of lords have received have not been of such a drastic nature as this, of course.

Various ministries, finding that the peers were unwilling to pass their proposed bills, have resorted to the threat to create enough new peers to swamp the house of lords. These new peers would, of course, have been pledged beforehand to vote for the ministry creating them.

In 1711 the prime minister of the day, the daring and unscrupulous Viscount Bolingbroke, was anxious to terminate the desolating and ruinous war with France, which had been raging on and off for twenty years.

To effect this purpose he had drawn up the treaty of Utrecht. It was necessary at that time that lords and commons should agree to a treaty before it would become valid. The commons assented to the treaty, but the lords declared that they would have none of it and that the war must go on, whereupon Bolingbroke coolly but firmly informed them that, rather than see himself defied by them, he would create a whole army of new peers to vote for the treaty.

The story goes that he had a regiment of the Life guards paraded under the windows of the house of lords and threatened to make every trooper into a noble lord if driven to it. He did make twelve new peers, and then the lords gave in.

The Liberal government of 1833, with Earl Grey as prime minister, used the same threat. They wished to pass the first reform bill. The lords hated this bill bitterly.

Until then they had been practically an oligarchy, with all the real power in their hands. The franchise had been so limited that only rich men, and generally only the nominees of some great noblemen, could get into parliament.

The reform bill altered that. It gave the smaller men a chance. The lords expressed their deliberate intention of wrecking the bill.

Earl Grey retorted by extorting from King William IV., who didn't like reform bills, but dared not oppose the wish of the nation for fear of a revolution—permission to call up to the house of lords as many new peers as should be necessary to carry his bill.

The mere threat was enough for the lords. They had no wish to see their order made cheap and ridiculous, as would have been the case had peers become as plentiful as blackberries.

It used to be the custom in the British army for all officers' commissions to be purchased. That is, an officer, instead of getting into the army by means of a competitive examination and rising by merit, came straight from school, without knowing anything of the new duties he was about to assume, and had a commission bought for him. After that, instead of being promoted as a reward for his services, he used to buy each promotion.

If he had no money his chances of being promoted were about a thousand to one. The result was that officers who had grown gray in the service and fought in many battles remained subordinates all their lives, while the sons of wealthy families who had not seen a quarter of their service jumped over their heads by having their way purchased up for them to be colonels and generals.

Mr. Gladstone decided to do away with this purchase system. The lords did not wish it to be abolished. Consequently, when Mr. Gladstone introduced a bill to abolish purchase in the army the house of lords was not disposed to give it a kind reception.

They threw out the bill and imagined that they had won a glorious victory. But Mr. Gladstone found that Queen Victoria had the power to abolish purchase in the army by her own act if she pleased. He induced the queen to do this by means of a royal warrant.

And the house of lords could no more interfere with a royal warrant than they could knock the dome off St. Paul's by throwing their coronets at it.—Pearson's London Weekly.

A NEED, JUST LIKE SLEEP.

In the Instinct of Natural Death Born In Man.

The most convincing fact in proof of the existence in man of an instinct of natural death seems to me that reported by Toxarsky in relation to an old woman. In the lifetime of Toxarsky I begged an acquaintance of his to obtain for me the details of this most interesting case, of which I had found but an incomplete statement. Toxarsky unfortunately could add nothing to what he had published in his article. I believe, however, that I have found the source from which his instance had been taken.

In his book upon the physiology of taste, which had its day of celebrity, Brillat-Savarin relates the following: "I had a great-aunt, ninety-three years old, who was dying. Although for some time confined to her bed, she had retained all her faculties, and her condition was only betrayed by her loss of appetite and the weakening of her voice. She had always shown a fondness for me, and I was near her bed, affectionately ready to wait on her, which did not prevent my watching her with the philosophical eye I have ever had for the things and events surrounding me. 'Are you there, nephew?' she asked, in a scarcely audible voice. 'Yes, aunt. I am here at your service, and I think you would do well to take a little good old wine.' 'Give, my dear child. One can always swallow liquid.' I hastened. Raising her gently, I made her take half a glass of my best wine. She brightened for a moment and, looking at me with eyes which had once been very fine, 'Thank you,' she said, 'for this last favor. If ever you reach my age you will find that death becomes a need, just like sleep.'

"These were her last words. Half an hour later she had fallen asleep forever. We unmistakably have here an instance of the instinct of natural death. The instinct was shown at a relatively early age in a person who had retained all her intellectual faculties."—Professor Elie Metchnikoff in Harper's.

Too Deep.

The story is told of a bank, disconsolate looking farmer who one day during the progress of a political meeting in Cooper institute stood on the steps with the air of one who has been surfeited with a feast of some sort.

"Do you know who's talking in there now?" demanded a stranger briskly, pausing for a moment beside the disconsolate farmer, "or are you just going in?"

"No, sir. I've just come out," said the farmer decidedly. "Mr. Evans is talking in there."

"What about?" asked the stranger.

"Well, he didn't say," the farmer answered, passing a knotted hand across his forehead.

A Poi Tiger.

Out of a river bed where it had tumbled when its dam was put to flight some hunters in India fished a tiger cub. In two days it was as tame as a kitten and grew up the playmate of the camp terriers. It was very fond of them and the terriers worshiped the tigress. To allay the fears of a woman visitor the tigress was one night chained up. Next morning the animal was found with a man under her. She had not hurt him. He was a thief and, not knowing of her existence, had come within the area which her length of chain enabled her to command. She sprang upon him, lay on him and kept him prisoner until guards came to release him.

ROOSEVELT

Taken to Task in the House by a Republican Congressman.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Representative Wadsworth of New York, chairman of the committee on agriculture, took occasion to speak in the house in vindication of himself and that committee for the work done last session in connection with the meat-inspection bill, and in doing so evoked a pronounced demonstration of approval. Mr. Wadsworth said:

Last June, when the meat inspection legislation was under consideration by congress, the chief executive of the nation saw fit in a letter addressed to the chairman of the committee on agriculture of the house of representatives, in unmeasured terms and in language conveying a threat, and in words intimating a doubt as to the sincerity and honesty of purpose of the members of that committee, to condemn the meat inspection bill reported by the committee on agriculture.

As the house well knows, the very bill condemned so severely by the executive in his letter to the chairman of the committee on agriculture, with few amendments in its verbiage, amendments which in no way increased its effectiveness, was signed by him on June 30, 1896, and now is the law of the land. In justice to and in vindication of myself, I offer the testimony of the secretary of agriculture as given by Mr. Melvin of the bureau of animal industry, the bureau having in charge the execution of the law.

He read from the testimony of Dr. Melvin, who testified to the efficiency of the measure. Mr. Wadsworth concluded as follows:

So that, after seven months of study of its provisions during which time many questions arose and had to be settled, and many rules and regulations promulgated, and after four months of active enforcement of the bill, the secretary of agriculture has not found it necessary to suggest or recommend a single amendment to make it more effective—not one.

NEWARK BADLY DEFEATED.

Coshocton defeated Newark in a polo game Tuesday night by a score of 11 to 1, the worst defeat administered this season. A report from Coshocton says that the Newark team played two periods fairly well, maintaining a stiff defense, but in the last period they could not maintain the pace and Goal Tender Honecka lost sight of the ball, which resulted in the score.

FAST GAME PROMISED.

There promises to be a warm game between Newark and Coshocton Saturday night at the Palace Rink in East Newark. Coshocton administered a bitter defeat to Newark on Tuesday, and Newark will try to take revenge on Saturday. The local team has been strengthened for the game by the addition of Halback Perry of the Uhrichville team. It was rumored at Coshocton that Newark would borrow several players from Mt. Vernon for this game but the report lacks verification.

FREE PORTS

Suggestion of Secretary Shaw, Who Speaks in New England.

Concord, N. H., Jan. 31.—Secretary Shaw spoke before the New Hampshire board of trade here on the subject of "A Foreign Market For American Labor." During the course of his address, Secretary Shaw developed an idea of bonded factories on a large scale. He said: "Merchandise can now be produced from imported material in bonded factories. It seems to be safe and wise to carry the logic of this provision one step further and have bonded or free ports. Suppose, instead of a bonded factory, we bond a well-defined section of land, containing, say several thousand acres. Within this bonded territory all kinds of factories could be entered without payment of duty. This port should, of course, contain no dwellings. I would allow free coal and every other element of manufacture, except labor, to be entered free."

A Considerate Actress.

A doctor saw Julia Marlowe as Juliet one night in Pittsburgh and was tremendously impressed. Only in the powerful death scene there was a technical error. "Miss Marlowe," the doctor said at a reception the next day, "I admired your Juliet profoundly. The impersonation was a work of art. But, pardon me, don't you know that a corpse doesn't stiffen for at least six hours after death?" Miss Marlowe answered in the drawl that she reserves for such speeches, "Now, doctor, do you think I'm going to keep my audiences waiting six hours for me to stiffen?"

Wonders of a
Modern Factory

The Perfect Food Is Made In Absolute Cleanliness.

A visit to the greatest modern food factory is a revelation to anyone not familiar with the development of machinery in recent years. Such a visit verifies the claims of the manufacturers of Malt-Vita, that this perfect whole-wheat food is cooked, steamed, mixed, baked and packed in absolute cleanliness. "Purity" is the watchword of this wonderful establishment. From the time the wheat is received in the factory until the finished product is shipped out to all parts of the world, Malt-Vita is not soiled by human hands. Machinery, clean, shining machinery conveys the wheat through all the long process, even to the packing and sealing of the air-tight, germ-proof, dirt-proof packages. After the wheat has been thoroughly cooked and steamed it is mixed with pure barley malt extract and each grain of the finished Malt-Vita is rolled into a wafer-like flake. Then it goes to the great ovens where, under intense heat, it is baked crisp and brown. Malt-Vita is always ready to eat. No cooking. No inconvenience. And you never tasted anything quite so good. All grocers, now 10 cents.

ALMANACH DE GOTHA.

History of This Old and World Famous Institution.

The Almanach de Gotha is more than an almanac. It is an institution. Bravely arrayed in red and gold, it lies on the table of every diplomatist, in constant request in the newspaper offices of all countries and makes a wider and more international appeal than any other annual of reference in the world. It is to Europe what Burke and DeBrett and the other peers are to the British isles, and it is also the lineal ancestor and model of such topical encyclopedias as our Whittaker, our Hazell and our Statesman's Yearbook. A political and social history of the world for the last 150 years could be written from its back numbers if these were readily accessible to its students. But they are not. The Almanach de Gotha began to appear in 1763, but the purchasers did not file it for reference. The earliest numbers in the British museum are those for 1774 and 1783, and a complete set can be consulted nowhere except in the editorial office in Friedrich's Alley in the little Thuringian capital. Probably not one in ten thousand of those who currently use the almanac has any knowledge of its interesting history.

It had of course its predecessors. The bibliographies of almanacs are ponderous tomes, and the middle of the eighteenth century was the golden age of this kind of literature. In Paris alone as many as seventy-three almanacs were published in the year 1760, including a royal almanac, an almanac for merchants, an almanac for Freemasons, an almanac of beasts, an almanac of badinage, etc. The city of Gotha itself had its own almanac from a still earlier date in the shape of an "improved Gotha genealogical and writing calendar," the origin of which is lost in the mist of antiquity, though a copy dated 1740 survives.—Francis Gribble in Scribner's.

A FEAT OF MEMORY.

Zangwill's Knowledge of the Famous
Trials of History.

As an indication of the quality of Zangwill's mental processes I may relate an incident that occurred while we were producing "The Children of the Ghetto." Mr. Zangwill was seated in my office, and we were going over some of the details of the play. It was the day that Labori, intimately connected with the Dreyfus case in Paris, was assassinated. Knowing that Zangwill had intimate knowledge of the case, a New York newspaper sent a representative up to see him. The reporter entered and after conveying the news said:

"Mr. Zangwill, we want from you a history of all the famous trials you can call to mind for our paper."

"Indeed?" said Mr. Zangwill. "I think I can prepare that for you. Come to see me in three or four days, and I will have it ready."

"We want it now," objected the newspaper man. "We want to print it in our paper tomorrow morning."

"But you surely don't expect me to quote you dates and facts out of my mind on the spur of the moment, do you?" asked Mr. Zangwill in astonishment. "Such a thing is out of reason." "I'm sorry, but it's the only way we can make use of it," replied the newspaper man firmly. Mr. Zangwill thought a moment and then asked if he could have my stenographer for a short time. He was called in, and Zangwill dictated to him then and there a two-column resume of all the famous trials of history, from Savonarola down, and quoted every important date and historical feature connected with each.—From "Israel Zangwill," by George C. Tyler, in Bohemian.

The Crowning Blow.

"Mothers and nurses have devised and invented many ways of procuring obedience and correct behavior from their little charges," said a park policeman. "The familiar 'boy man' is still employed, but the times change and the people with them. The last fine day, when the park was filled with mothers and nurses, I heard a new way of appealing to the love or fear of a child. A stylishly dressed young woman leading an irrepressible youngster, after making all sorts of threats and promises without effect, said, 'Child, child, you give me wrinkles under my eyes!'—New York Press.

To Cure a Bad Habit.

A way to cure a bad habit is thus explained by the Rev. Samuel McComb in the New York World: If you have a habit you wish to get rid of put your mind upon it after going to bed. Resolve to discard that habit at the moment you are lapsing from semiconsciousness into complete unconsciousness. Repeat the operation several nights, several weeks if necessary, and cure will follow, provided that the day after the first night the experiment is started you obey the impulse that will come on you to avoid the accustomed habit.

The Bad Place.

"What! Fishing on the Sabbath?" exclaimed the clergyman reprovingly. "Don't you know that little boys who fish on the Sabbath go to the bad place?" "Huh, I guess dat's right," replied the bad boy disgustedly. "I couldn't 'a' struck no worse place dan dis."—Philadelphia Press.

TROPICAL TITBITS.

Some of the Native Dishes That Are Served in Jamaica.

In Jamaica, as everywhere else, there are two ways to do things. There is the beaten track of the tourist to follow, with its hotels of varying excellence, conventional drives and all that sort of thing. To know the island and the allurements of its ingratiating tropical beauty, however, to appreciate the double interest of British resident customs, together with the quaint oddities of the negro native life "next to the earth," one must travel a different course. Courtesy to visitors to the island is everywhere manifest. There are native dishes that no hotel on the island can make to taste so good. These I learned the indefatigable deliciousness of a properly devised Jamaican black crab. There were served curries that would make a habitué of Delmonico's sit up and take notice—turtle, real turtle, prepared with a delicacy to delight an epicure, and native oysters that Jamaicans facetiously say "grow on trees." Tropical fruits in all their fragrance and juicy prime gave an intimation of the productive possibilities of the island. The green tinted Jamaica orange, thin of skin and richly juicy, grape fruit of superior quality, the avocado pear, oily in composition and nutty in flavor; pineapples—in Jamaica they cut them in half horizontally and eat them with a spoon—mangoes, akee, breadfruit, ochra, choco, yams, and more yams, were there to tempt the inexperienced palate.—Travel Magazine.

THE ARKANSAS HOG.

It Can Outrun a Greyhound and Whip
a Wolf or a Bear.

An esteemed contemporary gave space to the following communication from a subscriber on "The American Hog":

"Arkansas has a greater variety of hogs and less pork and lard than any state in the Union. An average hog in Arkansas weighs about fourteen pounds dressed with its head on and about six pounds and a half with its head off. It can outrun a greyhound, jump a rail fence, climb like a parrot and live on grass roots and rabbit tracks. It hasn't much tail or bristle, but plenty of gall. It will lick a wolf or a bear in a fair fight. It is called razorback because it is shaped like a sunfish. In hunting a razorback it is always shot at sideways, for there is not a ghost of a show to hit it otherwise, any more than to shoot at a split shingle. It can drink milk out of a quart jar on account of its long, thin head. This type of razorback is known as the stone hog because its head is so heavy and its nose so long that it balances up behind. The owner of this type of hog usually ties a stone to its tail to keep it from overbalancing and breaking its neck while running. If the stone is too heavy, it will pull the skin over its eyes, and it will go blind."

Switzerland a Modern Babel.

Switzerland, with its mixture of races and tongues, is a sort of modern Babel, a fact which causes much trouble in particular to the military authorities. At Wallenstadt the other day at the recruiting station there was a guard composed of five men. The chief was a lieutenant who spoke German only, the second a sergeant who spoke Italian only, the third a corporal who could speak French and Spanish, the fourth a private who could speak French and German, and the fifth a private who could speak French and Italian. When the lieutenant had to transmit an order to the sergeant he had to get the last named man to interpret for him. When he wanted to communicate with the corporal he had to requisition the fourth man, and so on, great delay and confusion being thus occasioned.—London News.

Shelley as a Boy.

Here is a glimpse of Shelley offered by Andrew Lang: "It seems almost incredible, but it is true, that I once knew a man who was at Eton with Shelley, who left in 1810. This was Mr. Hammond, a senior fellow of Merton college when I was an inquiring junior. About 1870 he told me all that I could extract from him about the poet. Shelley was not a clever boy; he never was sent up for good; which means, I conceive, that he never did a remarkable exercise in Latin verse. Mr. Hammond added that Shelley had a habit when he was walking alone of suddenly breaking into a sprint at a hundred yards pace. That was all."

She Didn't Do It.

The family jar waxed fiercer. "You talk about my being to blame for our marrying?" shrilly exclaimed Mrs. Vick-Senn. "John Henry, did I hunt you out and make love to you?" "No," he snorted. "But you could have given me the glassy eye and sent me about my business, and you didn't do it, madam—you didn't do it!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Gentleman.

"Supposing I decide to let you have the money, how do I know that I shall get it back at the time you mention?" asked Brown. "I promise it, my boy, on the word of a gentleman," replied Moore. "Ah! In that case I may think better of it. Come around this evening and bring him with you."

None Left.

"A college education," declared the enthusiastic mother, "brings out all that is good in a boy." "Yes," retorted William's father. "And in Bill's case I wish a little of it could have stayed in."—Cleveland Press.

TWO MILLIONS

To Confine the Turbulent Colorado
River to its Banks.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Besides fixing Feb. 20 as the day to vote upon the declaration that Senator Reed Smoot of Utah is not entitled to his seat; passing a bill appropriating $2,000,000 to confine the Colorado river to its banks, and another placing the management of the Panama railway under the isthmian canal commission, the senate listened to an extended speech by Senator Carter of Montana in criticism of the secretary of the interior, and another by Senator Heyburn to the same end. The recent order of the secretary preventing the issuance of patents to the public lands until after an examination on the ground by a special agent, was the subject of criticism, and many senators from western states by casual interruptions showed their approval of the sentiments expressed.

Cut Wires and Throw Acid.

Appleton, Wis., Jan. 31.—After throwing sulphuric acid into a banquet hall that had been darkened by the cutting of the electric wires, and burning five of a party of 120 Lawrence university students, at a hotel at Kaukauna, several Kaukauna ruffians kidnaped Leland Nye and were in the act of applying a coat of tar to Nye when interrupted by policemen and fellow students. The college students had driven to Kaukauna for a banquet and were attacked by 20 ruffians.

RHEUMATISM IS CURABLE
IF URIC-O IS USED

All Other Treatments Fail.

If the unhealthy foods we eat or the rapid pace in which we live that cause such an endless amount of rheumatism nowadays? The disease has certainly reached an alarming point, as nine-tenths of the adult population in this country are more or less afflicted with some form of this maddening disease. Recent investigation has proven the fact that rheumatism is a blood disease, therefore, many brilliant chemists and physicians have tried good ground to work upon and they have succeeded in compounding a remedy, which, if used as advised, cures it to drive and eliminate from the blood and muscles all excess of men's best test case. Purson Rheumatic Acid URIC-O is the name of this remedy. It is a liquid treatment, made and designed to cure all forms of rheumatism, and good for all other diseases. There is no poison in it, and it works in the blood, purifying it and driving out all impurities. SHOT BROTHER IN A QUARREL

DAGUE BOYS WHO LIVE NEAR GRANVILLE HAVE AN ALTERCATION.

Which Might Have Had a More Serious Result—George Dague
Was Arrested.

Granville, Jan. 31.—George Dague, aged about 16 years, and John Dague, aged 25 years, are the sons of Mrs. Thomas Dunaway, and live with their mother about one mile west of Granville.

Wednesday afternoon the younger brother, George, was brought here by Constable Shotts and taken before Squire A. T. Sayre, to answer to the charge of shooting with intent to wound and the hearing was had.

From the evidence it appears that the two boys were at home on Tuesday evening and were seated in front of a stove when John began a quarrel. One word led to another until John became infuriated and procuring a buggy whip struck his brother several times. George ran into an adjoining room and securing a revolver of the "American Boy" make, returned and fired at his brother, the bullet grazing the inside of his left knee.

Justice Sayre, after hearing the testimony, allowed George to go home, with a warning to be good.

A year or two ago the elder brother was adjudged insane and sent to the state hospital at Columbus for treatment. He improved so much that he was given a trial visit and for some time has transacted business and apparently been as sane as the majority of persons. It is thought that he has had a recurrence of his trouble, and will be treated again at the state hospital.

John Dague was taken before the Probate court Thursday afternoon and after examining a number of witnesses and on affidavit of a reputable physician he was adjudged insane and taken over to Columbus and turned over to officials of the state hospital.

FOUNDERS DAY IS CELEBRATED

By Franklin Society Men of Denison
University—K. of P. Entertainment—Granville News.

Granville, Jan. 31.—A number of enthusiastic Franklin men, alumni and active members, gathered with their lady friends to celebrate the annual founders' day exercises. The two college society halls were used, thus having plenty of room. Wraps were laid off in the Calliope hall, from which the company then passed in to the other room. Programs, gotten up in good taste, were distributed to the people as they entered. As printed it read:

Invocation—Dr. G. F. McKibben.
Piano Solo, Selected—Miss Dorothy Kibler.
Essay—Horace Huffman.
Declamation—Harry E. Orr.
Vocal Solo, Selected—Miss Elsie Hirschberg.
Essay—Emerson O. Bradshaw.
Franklin's History—William H. Shepard.
Violin Solo, (Schumann) "Abendlied." (Nochey) "Gypsy Dance"—Mr. Arthur L. Judson.
Crescent—W. Gear Spencer, Charles A. Carman.

Miss Hirschberg and Mr. Judson were unable to be present. The entire program went off very well. After the literary exercises were finished the society went back to the Calliope hall, where light refreshments were served and a general social time enjoyed. Many college songs were sung, and the company in leaving voted it a very successful affair.

Ohio Wesleyan against Denison on Saturday evening, Feb. 2 at Cleveland hall in a game of basket ball, will be an attraction worth seeing. Ohio Wesleyan holds the State championship up to this time, but Denison expects to reverse this state of things Saturday night.

One of the best sports in Granville during the week has been coasting. The long hills, especially that of Burg street, seems to have been formed especially for the boys and girls. Every evening large crowds enjoyed the coasting on Burg, Plum, College and Cherry streets. Two strong sleds connected by a long board constituted a "bob." One bob will hold from twelve to fifteen boys and girls. Starting at the top of Burg street some of the "bobs" never stop until they course nearly to the Columbus bridge on Cherry street. The "bob" is skillfully guided on the narrow icy track, so there is no danger in encountering pedestrians who are walking on the street. The only danger is in colliding with a rig that might be on some of the cross streets. There is little danger of this, for the driver is given timely warning by improvised warnings of the coasters. All that the coasters need is a little "elbow grease" to get to the top of the high hill. After they start down, the sled rapidly gains in velocity until it rivals the speed of a limited express train. It is a fine sight to stand at the intersection of the cross streets and watch lead after lead of happy coasters dash by in the moonlight, and then climb the long hill to have another merry race.

Altamaha lodge 296, Knights of Pythias of this place, has lately been keeping its workers busy, and for the past several months there has been something "doing" at every meeting. The result of this hustling on the part of the members is a large addition of new members, composed of the best citizens of Granville. Enthusiasm, real genuine Knights of Pythias enthusiasm, has taken hold of every member of Altamaha lodge. An invitation has been extended to the members of the two Newark lodges to be present at the meeting Wednesday night and a full car load of the Knights came up in response to the invitation. The meeting was one of the best ever held here, and the Page rank was conferred on six candidates and the Knight rank on nine by the splendid team of the lodge, the work being exemplified in a manner that elicited forth many compliments from the visitors. At the conclusion of the work a splendid banquet was partaken of which was enlivened with a flow of wit and wisdom seldom heard in the lodge. Prof. Hemstret, the renowned hypnotist, who gave one of his pleasing entertainments at the Opera House, Wednesday night, furnished amusement for the Knights for a short time. It was a great meeting and will long be remembered by those who attended it.

Next Wednesday afternoon, February 6, the Scientific Association will meet as usual. The department of physics will present the latest facts discovered in that field. Also sectional reports will be given by Prof. Brumback in chemistry and by Prof. Carney in geology. These meetings are of great interest to all and the help any scientific student may get from them is invaluable.

On Thursday morning at 10 o'clock will be held a preaching service in the chapel. Dr. Woelfkin will deliver the sermon. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the same day a prayer meeting will be conducted in the church. The services for Friday have not been definitely arranged as yet. It is probable though, that Dr. Woelfkin will speak to the men in the morning, the women in the afternoon, and to a joint meeting at night.

The Denison University Inter-scholastic Association has organized for the coming season, the following officers being elected:

Robert Luse, '07, president.
Harry Pine, '09, vice president.
Walter Beattie, '07, secretary-treasurer.
Horace Huffman, '08, manager.
Warren Morris, '10, advertising manager.

MAY MOVE B. & O. OFFICE TO NEWARK

DIVISION OF DISPATCHING WORK AT COLUMBUS IS BEING CONSIDERED.

Business So Heavy That It Cannot Be Handled Satisfactorily in the Capital City.

On account of the enormous traffic on the Columbus and Newark division of the B. & O. railroad, which is joint track and also used by the Pan Handle for all of its east and west bound trains between Columbus and the east, officials of the former road met at Newark Wednesday and discussed the advisability of either dividing the work of the train dispatchers of the B. & O. and B. & O. S. W. at the Columbus Union station or the transferring of the offices to some other point.

In the C. & N. division an average of 140 trains a day are handled and the dispatchers in addition to this enormous traffic direct the operation of the Midland division of the B. & O. S. W., which extends from Columbus to Midland City. The work is so official as to be discussing the advisability of either transferring the work of the Midland district to the B. & O. S. W. dispatching offices at Chillicothe of the C. & N. dispatchers from Columbus to Newark. There is also a possibility of abolishing the offices in the Union station and dividing the work between the Newark and Chillicothe offices. In that event the headquarters of Trainmaster Host may be moved to Newark. A decision in the matter will be reached in a few days.

Pan Handle Accident.

Pan Handle Engineer Joseph S. Stevens of Dennison, may die as a result of injuries received in the wreck near Isleta, a small station 11 miles east of Coshocton. The wreck occurred at 4 o'clock Tuesday evening and resulted in the injury of three other men. The wreck was due to "sideways" of a freight and an east bound wreck train at a switch, caused by failure to obey orders.

Stevens and his crew were in the of the cars of the wreck train and were covered with debris. Stevens had his collarbone broken, his head badly gashed and is thought to have sustained internal injuries, the seriousness of which are not yet known. He was removed on train 28 to his home in Dennison. He is 40 years of age. The fireman of the train was painfully bruised, and two other men sustained slight hurts, but had no bones broken.

Agents Are Wanted.

The operating and passenger departments of the B. & O. railroad, including the B. & O. S. W. railroad, have sent out a circular letter to all ticket agents and passenger conductors, impressing upon them the importance of strictly complying with the provisions of the Hepburn rate bill and forbidding any deviation from the passenger rates fixed by the tariff. They are told that there must not be a single exception to the prescribed rates and that the railroad company, its officers, agents or other employees willfully violating the law, or willfully permitting the same to be done, are subject to a fine of from $1000 to $20,000 for each offense in addition to imprisonment for two years. It explains that the same penalties are levied against passengers for any willful act whereby they secure transportation at less than tariff rates.

In concluding the circular, the instruction is given:
"The provisions of this law must be strictly observed by everyone concerned in selling tickets or collecting fares."

Pennsylvania Changes.

Charles Decker, for many years agent of the Pennsylvania lines west at Youngstown, and one of the best known traffic agents in this territory, has been promoted to the company's agency at Erie, including the Erie dock. He succeeds Frank G. Maus, who was advanced to division freight agent at Louisville. W. E. Flaherty, who was formerly a well known agent of the Pennsylvania company at various points, but who has been relief agent for some time, has been appointed to the Youngstown agency.

New Engine a Wonder.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company's new H-H type of freight locomotive which was recently turned out of the Altoona shops, was given a test run yesterday, which was witnessed by a number of officials of that company. The new engine is a world beater for power. It drew a train of 6 steel cars and three locomotives up a steep grade on the main line near Altoona. After the train was started a stop was made to permit a passenger train to pull into the Altoona station. It was thought that the monster engine would not be able to start the heavy train again but it did so with ease.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

MRS. CHARLES MURRAY.

Mrs. Charles Murray, wife of the well known B. & O. conductor, residing at No. 7 Avalon, West Main street, died Thursday morning at 5:45 from Bright's disease. Mrs. Murray, while having not been in good health for the past few years, was not considered seriously ill until three weeks ago.

With the death of Mrs. Murray the city has lost one of its best known and most generally beloved residents. Although the deceased was but 32 years of age, she had spent practically all of her life in this city, having been brought here from Allegheny, Pa., her birth place, at the age of only a few months. She was active in church work, being a member of the First M. E. church and of the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society, which was to have met at her home the coming week. In all things she lived up to the teachings of the Master and through her love of righteousness, her kindness, gentleness and sympathy, has caused her death to be mourned by a great number of friends.

Mrs. Murray was married in 1893 and became the mother of one child, Harry, aged 12, who, with his father survives. There are also three sisters, Mrs. W. R. Dickson, Columbus; Mrs. Harry Boyer, Akron, and Miss Edith Connor of this city, and two brothers, E. H. and T. E. Connor. Conductor Harry Connor of this city is the father of the deceased.

The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 1:30, the Rev. L. C. Sparks conducting the service. Interment in Cedar Hill.

MRS. ANTOINE MILLER.

Mrs. Antoine Miller, residing at 274 Buckingham street, one of the best known residents of North Newark, died suddenly Wednesday evening at 9:30 while returning from a call at the home of her sister, Miss Louise Koos of Clinton street. Death was due to heart trouble which had affected the deceased for some time. Mrs. Miller became faint when near the English milk depot, near Hoover street, and sat down on the step of the place of business where she was found shortly afterward by the proprietor. She was hurriedly taken inside, but passed away within a very few minutes.

The deceased was 64 years of age and leaves her husband, four daughters, Miss Clara of the Powers-Miller company, Mrs. James Dearduff of this city, Mrs. Clarence Hall of Terre Haute, Ind., and Mrs. Lawrence Phelan of Cleveland; also one son, Edward, at home. There remains but the one sister, Miss Louise Koos.

The funeral will take place Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Francis de Sales church.

Mrs. Miller was most highly respected all over the city, being very well known. Her character was one of the most exemplary and her death is mourned by a large circle of friends.

NANNIE ABBOTT.

Nannie Abbott, wife of William Abbott, East Newark, died Wednesday afternoon after a short illness. She leaves a husband and seven children. The funeral will take place at the home of Mrs. Aaron Hickey, Eastern avenue, Friday at 2 p. m. Interment in Cedar Hill.

ANGER IS DANGEROUS

Death Liable to Follow a Sudden Outburst of Temper.

FRENZY MAY SPELL SUICIDE

A Chemical Poison is Created in the System When One Indulges in a Fit of Rage—Famous Men Who Have Died in a Moment of Passion.

Death frequently follows a sudden fit of anger. Persons who are otherwise sensible and even philosophical indulge at times in this suicidal and profligate pastime. The Emperor Nerva died at the age of sixty-six from fever resulting from a fit of anger. Paul III, who occupied the papal throne from 1549 to 1559 and who was considered one of the most intelligent and liberal as well as just of popes, died from a sudden fit of anger while upbraiding Cardinal Alessandro Farnese, who had proved false to his friends and benefactor.

The emperor of Valentinian while addressing a deputation of backsliding Germans allowed his angry emotions to get the upper hand of his common sense and fell dead ere he had finished speaking. The celebrated English surgeon John Hunter indulged in angry dispute with one of his colleagues at St. George's hospital and dropped dead at the feet of him who had been the cause of the resentful and bitter remarks. The Russian surgeon Boddawski, being angered at the awkwardness of an assistant during a surgical operation, gave free vent to a fit of anger and expired without a moment's warning.

The milk as well as the flesh of animals that have died while in a rage has been found upon analysis to contain elements of poison, and many an innocent babe has been made dangerously ill by nursing at the mother's breast immediately after that mother had indulged in a fit of frenzy or anger. Neither the chemist nor bacteriologist has yet been able to demonstrate the particular poison or germ that renders the milk toxic under the conditions, but that a poison and a very active and energetic one exists is unquestionable.

Death during a fit of anger may be produced by a toxic product developed by the undue excitement as much as to the play of the emotions upon the nerve centers of the heart. Little children should be taught in earliest infancy to control their angry passions. A parent smiling approvingly at what he is pleased to term the "spunkiness" of his offspring without making any effort to reprove or to correct the outburst of ill temper is guilty of wanton neglect and is storing up much unpleasantness for both himself and the child in future.

"Anger is a stone cast into a wasp's nest," reads the Malabar proverb, and how often the angry word stirs up strife and discord and contentions that keep up a continual unpleasant buzzing until, like wasps disturbed in their nests, they alight upon the disturber, bringing a sting that wounds his own personality.

"Be slow to wrath" might be a cherished guide at any and every period of life. But as years run their course, particularly if accompanied by a feeble condition of body, a conscious tendency to fits of anger should induce habits of strenuous self control. This control, however, is not acquired in a day. The imprisoned fire of anger but waits for the kindling breath of provocation, and each time it is confronted by the latter a calm exterior, even though the spirit be at white heat, will win a victory without either party to the strife being a loser.

A bright three-year-old child who was given to passionate outbursts of resentful anger each time her wishes were thwarted was one morning suddenly lifted to the mirror with the mother's admonition, "Look at yourself!" Immediately the child's resentful face changed, and, nestling to her mother, who wisely refrained from saying another word regarding the ebullience of temper, she, with an apologetic hug, softly sobbed away the resentment.

Some weeks afterward, during which time there was a marked change for the better in the temperament of the child, the mother had occasion to reprove the little one for an act of disobedience, using perhaps unnecessary warmth of temper at the time. Without hesitation the little one seized her by the hand and took her to the mirror.

"Look at yourself!" she exclaimed, her childish voice as severe as her strength permitted, at the same time struggling desperately to keep the angry lines from her own tiny face by puckering her lips into a form from which issued a succession of soft, nonchalant oos.

The lesson had been taught, learned and retaught, and who shall say how far reaching its influence? If one can only be brought to understand the toxic effect of anger upon the whole sensuous system of the individual, resulting, as it frequently does, in sickness and even death, each would be more at peace with his neighbor, with the community and with the world at large.

AMUSEMENTS

AUDITORIUM TONIGHT.

The Magazine Program tonight, January 31, at the Auditorium for the Young Ladies' Missionary society of the First Methodist church, will be a high interpretation of literature and art. Mrs. Ruff will give an intensely dramatic reading, "The Departure of Hagar," a Biblical number, besides many other lighter numbers. A class of charming young ladies have achieved wonderful success in displaying the grace of the Grecian maiden and will produce a beautiful Grecian drill. Another class of bright girls will give that ever new and attractive exercise, the Maypole.

The comical page, "The Old Maids Tea Party," a humorous pantomime, is the hit of the evening. In their antiquated costumes a hostess and nine guests portray gossiping, the stately minuet and the march to the tea table. The eldest old maid entertains with an appropriate vocal number. This is a most laughable affair from start to finish. The last part of the Magazine will consist of tableaux, representing the usual advertisements. The Gold Dust Twins, Ayer's Hair Vigorator, the Kodak Girl and many others.

Don't miss the Fashion page. See the newest things out. The best vocal talent in the city will assist in this popular Magazine entertainment. You can not afford to miss this elaborate program given exclusively by home talent, accompanied by a full orchestra.

the parts are in the hands of clever actors the production will be a complete one in all respects. Special feature will be the first appearance in America of the wonderful acting Landseer dogs, Victor, Czar, Leo and Zip, magnificent specimens of the highest class of canine development. For seven years these dogs were the talk of Great Britain and have the record of appearing twelve consecutive weeks in London.

rect costumes, an engrossing plot and brilliant lyrics, are said to be some of the features of "Isle of Bong Bong," that have assisted it to gain the enviable place it holds in the esteem of theater goers. This sparkling musical surprise has been sent on tour this season by Mr. Whitney in response to an urgent demand for it in all the cities it will visit, and he has equipped it in the sumptuous manner characteristic of all his big musical productions. In the original groupings and ensemble numbers of this delightful satire, Gus Solhko, Mr. Whitney's general stage director, is said to have exceeded himself, and a perfect presentation is promised.

MRS. CARTER ENJOINED.

New York, Jan. 31.—Supreme Court Justice Leavitt granted the permanent injunction asked by Edna Milton Royle, assuming Charles H. Birmingham and Mrs. Leslie Carter from producing the play "Cleopatra" which Royle adopted from "Artists Forty-seven."

It was stated in court that over $50,000 had been spent in the production, and it was to begin in Buffalo next Monday. The justice said he considered it excellent to render an early decision so that the parties might, if possible, compound their differences.

Oration by Hon. Moses Blossom

Full Text of His Address, "What's de Use?" at the Limekiln Club.

(Copyright, 1906, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

WHEN the regular routine of business had been concluded the other evening at the Limekiln club, Brother Gardner rose and said that a colored stranger named the Hon. Moses Blossom was in the anteroom and would deliver an oration.

The stranger was from Alabama, and nothing was known of him, but as he evidenced a disposition to borrow money and become very intimate it would be well to have his oration over with and send him along to Buffalo. The oration was entitled "What's de Use?" and, according to the Hon. Blossom, had been delivered 2,800 times in different parts of the country with great effect. There would be no charge, but after the meeting the orator would be ready to sell a corn salve and an invention to prevent ingrowing toe nails at special prices for the occasion.

Samuel Shin was warned that if he threw pepper on the hot stove he would be dropped out of the window into the alley, and Givendiam Jones got a hint to suppress his cough or get out, and all was then ready for the stranger.

The Hon. Blossom appeared to be a man of forty. His left shoulder lopped, and he limped in his right leg. His was not a smiling, cheerful countenance, but it wore a look of determination, as if he would sit down before a good dinner and stay there until the last crumb was devoured. He exhibited no embarrassment and was cheered as he took the platform and began:

"My fren's, I has arrove yere, same as I has arrove at hundreds of other places, to find men and women strivin' fer place and power, fer riches and happiness, fer de head ob de percession and de big end ob de cake.

"Dat's only human natur', encouraged by every book we read and every paper we pick up. At de present date dar am a millyun pussions in dis world encouragin' de rest ob us to climb up. Dey gils us mottoes to adopt and precepts and examples to foller, and dey tell how easy it am fer any one to go from de tail ob de class to de head.

"Ober dar sots Pickles Smith. He am jist achin' to climb to de top and own and run a possoffice and reserve ten boxes fer his own maid.

"Ober dis way sots Elder Penstock. He has been told dat dar am no reason on airth why he shouldn't be governor ob dis state, and he am tastin' de fried oysters he will have when dat event happens.

"In front ob de store, wid his years workin' back and fo'th and his eyes shinin' wid ambishun, am Drawback White. He has read dat honesty and industry will boost a man to de top ob de pole, and he am lookin' forward to ownin' a steamboat and bootin' de deck hands about.

"So it goes from one to de odder, all wantin' sunthin' better, all achin' to climb up. No one ob you am content wid his station in life. Sich ob you as kin afford claims don't want to stop at dat. You want holster. Sich ob you as have patent leather shoes am sighlin' fer gold headed canes to match.

"I am fur from wantin' de world to stand still or discouragin' ambishun, but I am at de same time compelled to ask, 'What's de use?' We has all read ob Caesar. He made up his mind to go to de top, and he got dar. Refo' he begun tryin' he was a contented man. If de flour and potatoes and bacon was out, he knowed whar he could git mo'. If a circus come along, he was dar. If dar was a boss race, he had his $2 up on de right boss. He had de money in his pocket to pay his taxes, and if he went into a saloon and found a dozen men dar he didn't have to drink alone and make a screw.

"How was it when Caesar reached de pinnacle? Nuffin but trouble—trouble in de maw'nin', trouble at noon, trouble when he laid his weary head on de pillar. He had heaps ob money, but no enjoyment; he had heaps ob fren's, but no enemies; he had heaps ob power, but no 'buff to save his own life. Some few went when dey buried him, but dar was hundreds who rejoiced. Kin any ob you tell me what he gained? Kin any ob you tell me what was de use?

"Dar was Hammerable. As a farm-er's son he bood corn, milked cows, fed de hawks and had biled dinners twice a week. He drove to town wid a good lookin' gal whenever dar was a circus, and he was allus on hand at camp meetin's and county fairs. He was content and growin' fat till ambishun hit him. He got it into his head dat he wanted to climb up, and nobody could hold him. He clumb and clumb and clumb. He got to de werry top. He got to whar he could look up and see no one on de limb above him. He got fame, but he didn't have time to eat his meals. He got glory, but he made enemies every hour. He won victories, but he come home to find dat de lawgs had broke into his garden and rooted everythin' up. He reached de top only to die, and his breath had only passed away when de newspapers was sayin' more things about him.

"Napoleon was de man ob all de world fur a quarter ob a century. From libbin' in a garret he come to lib in a palace. From bein' a nobody he come to be ruler ob de world. Dar man could go out and lick a kentry and annex it as easy as you or me could go out and saw half a cord of wood. But what did it all amount to in de end? What was de use? Dar come a day when he was pulled off de perch and libed and died an exile.

"I was talkin' wid Givendiam Jones ob dis club last night. He works in a wood yard at $2 a day. He has got a cuckoo clock and a red sofa in his house. He owns a winter overcoat wid a velvet collar to it. He kin put up a dollar on a boss race any day in de week. If kerosene goes up a cent a gallon, he don't cuss. If bacon drops a cent a pound, he don't chuckle ober it. He has got a name dat compels respect. When he starts fer home at night, eben de police git out of his road. His wife gibs a high tea one week and a low coffee de next, and she kin bid two pairs ob two dollar shoes a year. Kin you draw me a picture ob contentment and prosperity to beat dat?

"And yet what does Givendiam Jones want? He wants to change his front name to Claude; he wants to find sunthin' to take de kink out ob his har' and pass for a Cuban; he wants a diamond pin and a plug hat; he wants to be de mayor ob dis city and gradually climb up to de presidency; he wants to be known as de 'it' ob de United States. He would leave all contentment behind him fur a few years ob greatness. Think ob it! Think ob swappin' his name as Givendiam fur dat ob Claude! Why, such a thing would make de very planets halt in deir course!

"My fren's, I ask you again, what's de use? It's a question I has asked ten thousand times and shall keep on askin'. Nobody is brung into dis world wid any particular objec' in view. If he draps into a good place, what's de use ob bekin' and wishin' it was a better one? We am bo'n and lib our time and den pass away. What's de use ob wastin' half a lifetime in a struggle dat don't amount to shucks if you win? Hain't it better to be content wid what you've got and sot down and enjoy it to de utmost? When you've got a cuckoo clock, you've got to have a red sofa to match. When you've got de red sofa, you've got to begin to look out fer moths, and so it goes right along up to de top. Think ob dese things. Turn 'em ober in your minds. Don't let 'em go past widout askin' yourself, 'What's de use?'

"I didn't arrove yere to take up your valuable time. I jist wanted to git off what was on my mind, and, havin' accomplished dat purpose, I now return my heartfelt thanks and bid you all good night." M. QUAD.

The New Term. "It is wonderful how the automobile craze has spread in the past three years," said the one night stand actor to the man in the car seat beside him.

"Guess it has," said the man. "Yes, indeed," the actor resumed. "I was playin' in a western town the other night and had the misfortune to forget my lines. As I stood there hemming and hawing the entire audience arose as one man and joyfully yelled, 'Stalled.' Two years ago when I broke down there in an exactly similar manner the very same audience got right up and shouted, 'Stuck.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Kidney Disease

Nature has given you kidneys to keep your blood clean and pure. As the blood flows through them the waste matter it brings from all over your body is filtered out through millions of little tubes, so small that they can be seen only under a microscope. Unless these tiny tubes are kept open, waste matter accumulates in your blood.

If the blood is chilled in any part of your body, or held back by pressure or injury, uric acid turns into uric crystals, accumulating in grains of fine sand. Over-feeding also may produce so much waste matter that your blood can't keep the uric acid dissolved, and the crystals are formed. Your kidneys cannot pass these crystals—they lodge and collect in the little filtering tubes, where they scratch and irritate the tender fibres, just as grains of sand would do in your eye. This irritation causes the pain in your back which warns you of kidney disease, Bright's Disease and Death.

At the very first sign of kidney disease, you must take LIFE PLANT. LIFE PLANT has the power of dissolving the hard uric acid grains, being provided by Nature for just that purpose. You will feel relief from the first, and in a short time LIFE PLANT will have gently washed every trace of uric acid out of your kidneys (or wherever else it may exist) and give the organ back its blood-purifying powers. Thousands have saved themselves by taking LIFE PLANT. Read what Mr. John Lemon, of Wadsworth, Ohio, says:

"In regard to your medicine, I think it can't be beat in the world. Once I was so bad that I could not walk. I took one bottle and can say that I feel all right. My kidneys troubled me and I was 'dizzy in my head.' That has about all left me. I think one more bottle will fix me all right. I can't say too much for Life Plant."

"If you have any trouble whatever, write your symptoms to I. J. Mizer, M. D., President of the Life Plant Co., who will send you his personal advice, free. Our book—GOOD HEALTH—mailed to anyone free on request.

BLIND JUSTICE

(Original.)

The coroner was seated at his desk, before which on supports rested a coffin containing the dead body of a young girl of the poorer class. She had been found murdered the night before on a road leading into the town. No one knew her, and the body had been held as long as seemed best for identification. The only person to whom the slightest suspicion attached was a man who had been seen walking on the road near where the body had been found. The police of the neighboring towns had been notified, and the man had been arrested and identified by the person who had seen him. The prisoner was undergoing his examination.

"Did you ever see the deceased before?" asked the coroner.

"Never."

"What were you doing on the road?"

"I am a commercial traveler and often walk from one town to another instead of waiting for a train. It was so in this case."

"Did you see anything of this girl on the road?"

"I have told you that I never saw her before."

The coroner conferred with a police official, then turned again to the prisoner.

"There is no evidence against you, and I suppose you are entitled to a discharge, but you will have to remain in the care of the police for a short time."

At that moment several persons entered, leading a blind man.

"This man, your honor," said one of them, "has come to town looking for his daughter, who, he says, has been recently led away from her home. We have told him of this dead girl, and he desires to know if it is she he is seeking."

The moment the old man appeared the prisoner started. Then he looked about him to see if his agitation had been noticed and, feeling assured that all eyes were and had been on the blind man, resumed the careless air that he had shown during his examination. The blind man, who was old and on whose face were the lines of suffering, was led up and stood trembling before the coroner. After some preliminary questions he was asked to tell his story.

"My little girl," he said, "is a good girl. She is all I have to love and the only person in the world who loves me. She cannot be dead. She is not dead. She must not be dead. She worked in a factory, and when she went to work in the morning she gave me a loving kiss. All the long day I waited for her to come home, and then there was another loving kiss, and, though tired, she talked brightly to me, cheering me like the flame of a fire on the hearth to you who can see. She never went gadding about in the evening, but stayed at home with me, though I encouraged her to bring her young companions to my home."

"But of late she had seemed troubled. She could not cheer me as she had been used to doing, or, if she did, I knew it was with an effort. And I noticed that the more troubled she was the more affection she showed me. Two weeks ago she embraced me more tenderly than ever before, hanging about my neck as though she would never let go."

"From that day I have not seen her. My neighbors have told me that she had been seen several times with a man, but I could get no description of him. I feel sure the man they saw her with has been the cause of her leaving me. I have visited a number of towns in hopes of finding her, without success. These people have told me that you have a dead girl in here who is not known, but I do not think it can be my girl. Still, I will satisfy myself that she is not."

"How can you do that?" asked the coroner. "You can't see."

"I can tell my Maggie," said the witness.

"Your honor," said the prisoner, then checked himself.

"Well, what is it?" asked the coroner.

"Nothing; only that an identification by a blind man is a travesty on justice."

"How does that concern you?" asked the coroner, looking at the prisoner with a new interest.

"Only generally," replied the prisoner, endeavoring to resume his careless manner.

"By what means," said the coroner to the witness, "can you know your daughter?"

"Let me put my hands on her face, and I will know her at once."

An ashiness spread itself over the features of the prisoner.

"Lead him to the body," said the coroner, "and place his hands on it."

The old man's hand was placed on the waist. He started. He ran his fingers up the body till he came to the neck, when he uttered a moan. Quickly he passed his hand over the face from chin to forehead and staggered.

"Oh, Maggie, Maggie!" he moaned.

"Your daughter?" asked the coroner quickly.

"My daughter," wailed the old man.

There was a silence broken only by the blind man's sobs; then he was led away. The coroner turned to the witness.

"You will be held till you can show that you are not the man described as having led the girl away."

The prisoner staggered, put his hand to his head and would have fallen had he not been supported by a policeman, who led him away. He was indicted and tried for the murder, proved guilty and confessed on the scaffold.

A Marriage Lottery

(Original.)

In Smolensk, Russia, marriage is really a lottery. Four times a year a prize is drawn there in the matrimonial market. Five thousand tickets are sold at a ruble a ticket. The winner of the 5,000 rubles is bound to marry a certain girl. Should the girl decline to marry him they may divide the money between them. In case the man is already married he may turn over the money and the matrimonial prize to any friend he may select.

One day a traveler stopped in the town and, hearing of the lottery, gave a servant 10 rubles and told him to buy ten tickets. The drawing was to take place that evening, and after supper the stranger strolled around to the building appointed for the purpose.

The wheel was turned and a paper drawn. He who drew it held it up, looked at it and said:

"The winner is Dmitri Waronovich."

The stranger started. Every one looked at every one else. No one seemed to know who Dmitri Waronovich was.

"If Dmitri Waronovich is here, let him come forward."

The stranger advanced and after some questioning was credited with the money and conducted to the house of the girl he had drawn.

Mirza, Dovenieff was of a station far beyond those who would usually play themselves up to be raffish for a fancy for such a role had taken possession of her, though she had no idea of marrying the man who should draw the prize of which she was a part. Nevertheless there is a fascination in meeting one never before seen who is to be something more to us than a stranger and maybe of immense importance. Naturally Mirza had dreamed of many different kinds of men and that at their meeting he who had won her would be mad to wed her. These, of course, were merely dreams, for she knew the class that bought tickets in the lottery and had no doubt she would divide the money prize with the winner and remain a spinster—at least for him.

It was certainly an exhilarating moment for these two when the door separating them opened and they stood face to face, Mirza's heart beating like a trip hammer.

"You are a stranger here," she said.

"I am. I arrived this afternoon. I bought some tickets to the lottery and, singularly enough, won."

"I suppose you know the conditions?"

"The only condition I know is that I have won a wife."

"You are mistaken. I have the privilege of dividing the money prize with you and remaining single."

"May I ask why one of your class entered for this lottery?"

"For a new sensation. And you—why did you buy tickets?"

"For a new sensation."

"Are you quite sure the hope of winning the money was no inducement?"

"I shall resign my share of the money to you."

"And I have resolved to give my share to the poor."

"Singular," said the man wonderingly, "that two people among 5,000 should have been captivated by a whim and the man in the case should have won."

"Remarkable, especially since you do not live here."

"I never was here till a few hours ago."

"You reside?"

"In Tula when I am at home, but I am seldom at home."

During the dialogue the couple remained standing, but suddenly it occurred to the lady that she was treating the man who had won her very coldly, and she asked him to be seated. Then she rang for refreshments. It was late when the fortunate man left the house, and on reaching his inn he was besieged by a throng to know if there would be a wedding or a division. He announced that there would be neither. The 5,000 rubles were to be given to the poor. This was done the next morning.

The curious people of Smolensk had forgotten all about the singular outcome of the drawing when it was revived by the appearance of the winner of the prize in the town. He looked somewhat thinner than before and careworn. He came frequently after that, always looking more distraught than before. Finally at one of his visits he departed looking radically happy. The next day the townspeople were agog at the announcement that the couple who had won 5,000 rubles and given them to the poor were to be married after all.

The groom prospective told his fiancée that after their marriage they would live in his home in Tula; that he had held a government position, but his marriage, for some reason he did not explain, required him to resign it. She was about to marry him for love, but since he assured her he could support her, was respectable and she had some property of her own she did not inquire thoroughly into his social or monetary condition.

The wedding over, with its peculiar Russian customs, the couple were about to depart for Tula when a telegram addressed to Count Orlendoff was handed to the groom to know if he knew any such person. He tore it open, read it and handed it to the bride. It was an order from the emperor to return to St. Petersburg at once and ended, "Your marriage will be recognized."

Then the recipient explained to his bride that he was of blood royal, but not of near kin, and in the service of the emperor, who doubtless found he could not get on without his assistant.

It would be a veritable God-send to the unfortunate who suffer from rupture, if all could procure the Brooks Rupture Appliance and wear it. They certainly would never regret it. INTERVIEW WITH WEATHER PROPHET

His Predictions Have Been Highly Regarded and for 1907 They May Be Relied Upon.

Yesterday this paper detailed one of its reporter's staff to interview Mr. Artomys Monax, who is one of our most reliable weather prophets, and who, with his family, lives in the suburbs of the city.

The name and number not appearing in the city directory made his residence most difficult to find; but unflinching pertinacity with which a natural news-man is endowed, our reporter at last found the residence sought.

After repeated knockings on the door, one of the young Monaxes answered, took the reporter's card in, and after quite a delay, returned, explaining that his father had been asleep and was with difficulty aroused, but to come in, and that the old gentleman would be pleased to grant the representative of the Advocate an interview.

Mr. Monax greeted the news-gatherer with great cordiality, really appeared more than unusually glad to see him, which fact was subsequently explained in the interview that followed:

"Want my prognostications about the weather, eh?" asked Mr. Monax, in greeting the scribe. "Well, yes," answered the reporter, "that is really the nature of my business with you today."

"All right," said the old gentleman. "Take a seat, it will not take long, and I'll be pleased to tell you all I know about it."

Then he told one of the little Monaxes to blow up the fox-fire in the corner, jokingly adding, "that will make a little more light on the subject."

Then the reporter interpolated, "Mr. Monax, I certainly appreciate your kindness in this matter, for do you know that it is common talk that you are rather difficult to approach or to secure an interview from on this subject?"

"Easily explained," answered the old gentleman. "Ordinarily all the reporters that knock on my door ask: 'Is the ground-hog in?' That's not my name, and I do not answer to it. I do not like it any more than a prize mule likes to be called a jackass; but you asked for Mr. Monax, and Mr. Monax will be pleased to treat you as one gentleman should treat another."

The scribe thanked him, then asked: "Is it true that your family invariably go out on the second day of February for the purpose of forecasting what the weather will be for the ensuing six weeks?"

"That's a lie, made of whole cloth, and gotten up by some of my competitors for the purpose of deceiving the public," he answered with asperity. "Of course we go out on that day or any other old day toward spring, if the weather is moderating, and that part of the lie in which they say that we are afraid of our shadow, and if we see it on February second, we bolt for our door, and that it will be cold weather six weeks longer, is the limit. Don't you know that our family is different from other families, in that, that we have more sense than we look to have?"

The old gentleman was getting warmed up. "But if you really want some fancy and reliable predicting of the weather, your 'Uncle Artomys' is the proper party to apply to, so get your pencil ready for I'm quite willing to go on record."

"From February second on, whenever the weather is warmer the temperature will be much higher, and when the mercury contracts in the tube we will experience a cold spell. There will be considerable of this kind of weather until it settles; and even after that we can expect rains in April, accompanied with humidity."

The old gentleman then arose, signifying that the interview was at an end. The reporter thanked him heartily for the above information, and telling him that no doubt that it would be appreciated by the Advocate's readers, took his departure and was told by Mr. Monax that he would be pleased to prognosticate for the Advocate at any time in the future.

INHERITS FORTUNE FROM HIS UNCLE

FRANK G. KINGSTON, A LOCAL BLACKSMITH COMES INTO ESTATE OF $38,000.

Relative in California Leaves Him Entire Property, Gained in Fruit Growing.

Mr. Frank G. Kingston son of Mr. James Kingston, the former well known blacksmith at the McNamar machine shops, this city, is reported to have inherited a fortune of $38,000, which was left to him by an uncle. Frank Kingston was born and brought up in Newark, having for many years lived with his parents on South Fifth street. Some years ago he removed with his father to Columbus, and has made that his home.

Mr. Kingston's sister, Mrs. Joe Booth, wife of the well known B. & O. train dispatcher, resides on North Fourth street, this city.

The Kingstons are well remembered by many people in Newark, who will read the following taken from a Columbus paper, with interest:

"From a position of moderate circumstances as a blacksmith to one of affluence and the possessor of an estate estimated at $38,000, within the period of a few weeks as the result of the favor of an uncle seems to be the destiny of Frank G. Kingston, 35 years of age, of 910 Champion avenue, an employee of the Jeffrey Manufacturing company, who was informed last Thursday afternoon that he had been designated the sole heir of the estate of his uncle, Samuel Kingston, who died at San Jose, Santa Clara county, California, January 15 last at the age of 65.

Kingston said yesterday that he will wait a couple of weeks before going west to take legal possession of the property, as he has duties here which he wishes to perform before leaving the city. The administrator of the estate, Attorney P. F. Gosbey, of San Jose, forwarded to Kingston a copy of the will, which was made January 3. The fortune which was accumulated in the fruit growing industry, for the most part consists of stocks, bonds and moneys.

"The uncle had no children. The wife died several months ago. Among the survivors are seven brothers and sisters, including Frank Kingston's father, James Kingston, of Wilson avenue, this city, who may contest the will. It would not believe such a step, however, would attach much weight, as according to the heir, the deceased uncle did not communicate and came to the United States when years. He was born in Nova Scotia and came to the United States when quite young. He joined the Pennsylvania 'Bucktails' at the outbreak of the civil war and served until the conclusion of the contest.

"He then went west, where he tried various forms of making a livelihood until he settled on fruit growing. He retired from active labor several years ago and converted practically all his lands into securities.

"Learning that his uncle had settled in San Jose, Frank Kingston went there in the spring of 1897. After a visit of a couple of weeks he embarked on a vessel plying between San Francisco and Alaska. For 19 months he served on vessels on the Pacific, plying between the coast and the Hawaiian islands and Japan. During this time he would spend a week occasionally at the home of his uncle.

"After knocking about the Pacific coast until 1902, he returned to Columbus and took up the trade of blacksmith. He married Miss Lillian Bartel, daughter of Mrs. Jennie Bartel, 829 East Mount street, October 15, 1903. He has three children, the youngest only a few weeks old.

"The family occupies a pretty home which was recently built as the result of Kingston's savings. He said he did not propose worrying a moment over the prospect of becoming wealthy. If through some unforeseen circumstances disgruntled relatives should successfully contest the will he will quietly abide by the court's decision. Should there be no contest he will not allow his new possessions to interfere with his present enjoyment of work, he said."

Your Grocer Has it Now

WHO WILL HELP?

Every one who wants to help make Newark beautiful the coming summer must be planning now, for February is the month in which we lay out the seeds and plants with which we expect to beautify our yards and gardens.

Let us plan our yards upon paper now, arranging so we can have the best effect, cover all unsightly places with vines, select the tallest plants for a background and graduating them until we have a pretty border of ever parsley or lettuce.

It is not always the great and expensive things that give the most pleasure and happiness but it is learning to make the most of what is at hand.

The selection of seeds and plants is very important, and upon this depends the success of our garden during the coming year. The best seeds are the cheapest, and let us learn their names. They are like children, they must have a name, and then we become interested in them. We do not think much of just a pansy, but when we speak of the "Snow Queen," the "Fire King," or "the Giant Yellow Prince," then they have an individuality and the child will weave about them a fairy tale and the grown person a romance and in a short time each flower will be a friend, and what is more uplifting, what is more refining than to live with the trees and flowers.

Let us get nearer to nature and listen more often to her voice. Let us get the children interested now, have each one draw a plan of his own back yard and how he thinks it should be, and then with a little help from parents or teacher, he could be shown where the plan could be improved. Get a small store box and have the small box saw it to the depth of three or four inches, put into this good soil, and here start your "snowball" and "crimson" asters, your "Lady Bird," "Spotted King" and "Golden Queen" nasturtiums.

Then have ready for the first pretty day in March your "Fire-flv," "Bronze King," and "America" sweet pea or whatever your choice may be, for flowers are just like people, each one has a different countenance and we do not all like the same people nor do we like the same names, but as every flower has a name, and some so beautiful we can have almost any one we want to live in our garden for the coming year, and if we find upon closer association we do not care for them, let us give them to some one else. They may love them.

A NEWARK CASE.

Many More Like It In Newark.

The following case is but one of many similar occurring daily in Newark. It is an easy matter to verify its correctness. Surely you can not ask for better proof than such conclusive evidence.

C. L. Starr, harnessmaker, of 89 Hancock St., Newark, O., says: "My confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills as a kidney and backache remedy is unbounded. In recommending this preparation I speak from experience. For years I was a sufferer from kidney complaint and backache and could get no relief. I had a miserable aching pain in the loins and my back was lame and weak. It was just as bad night or day and when I attempted to stoop or pick up anything a pain would strike me in the back that almost made me fall. If I remained in one position for any length of time and then moved quickly the pain stabbed me like the thrust of a knife. I suffered in this way for years, and all the remedies that I tried failed to help me. I was just as bad as ever when I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Crayton's drug store, and you may believe that I was delighted when the first few doses brought me relief. In less than forty-eight hours the backache was gone and I continued the treatment until entirely free from my old trouble. My wife used Doan's Kidney Pills and they did the same for her, and neither of us have had any return of kidney trouble since using them."
